BETA aims at increasing its exports with new markets

beta, the global chocolate manufacturer, has set its sights on new markets, with a focus on expanding its presence in the Middle East and North Africa.

Beta, the global chocolate manufacturer, has set its sights on new markets, with a focus on expanding its presence in the Middle East and North Africa. The company, which has been in the market for over 100 years, is looking to increase its global footprint and reach new consumers in emerging markets.

Beta's expansion strategy: Beta is investing in new production facilities and distribution networks in the Middle East and North Africa. The company is also launching targeted marketing campaigns to build brand awareness and drive sales in these regions.

Key products: Beta's product portfolio includes a wide range of chocolate bars, truffles, and confectionery. The company is particularly known for its 'Stars' brand, which offers a variety of flavors and textures.

Partnerships: Beta is collaborating with local distributors and retailers to ensure its products are readily available to consumers in the target markets. The company is also exploring opportunities for strategic partnerships with other food and beverage brands.

Future outlook: Beta is optimistic about its growth prospects in the Middle East and North Africa. The company believes that its commitment to quality and innovation will continue to drive its success in these markets.
